Raouf is first-class high-flyer

Ealing Hammersmith and West London College student, Raouf Touaibi, 20, has fought off fierce competition from other would-be cabin crew members to secure a role with Ryanair.

Raouf, who has been studying on the Level 2 Cabin Crew course since September, will be finishing off his coursework with support from lecturers so he can join the airline in late May. The course offers students realistic environments in order to hone their skills in passenger service and management, health and safety and more. The course has been running at the Hammersmith and Fulham College for many years, and has seen students join airlines such as BA, Emirates, Etihad and Thomas Cook.

Tutor Monish Bhandari says: “Raouf has been a great student, and his calm, unflappable nature lends itself perfectly to a Cabin Crew role. I wish him the greatest success in his new career.”

Raouf says: “I’m absolutely delighted to be joining Ryanair. The interview was tough, and lots of candidates didn’t make it through the process. This is an amazing opportunity that I didn’t expect to happen so quickly – I’ll be working on routes out of Bournemouth Airport right from the beginning of the holiday season.”

The College is holding an open event at the Hammersmith and Ealing Colleges on 15 June between 4pm and 8pm.
